SUMMARY

Oregon State University student pursuing a bachelor's degree in Data Science, with a background in software development, business operations, and project management. Experienced in building web applications, leading teams, and solving real-world problems through technology. Particularly interested in statistical analysis, predictive modeling, and the application of data science in professional sports. My goal is to develop the technical and analytical skills necessary to uncover meaningful insights, improve decision-making, and eventually contribute to innovations in sports analytics.
